

Our work

This information is about the
National Centre of Excellence in Intellectual Disability Health.

We call it the Centre for short.

What the Centre does

The Centre does 4 types of work.

We talk about 1 type of work on each page of this information.

National Leadership and Advocacy

One of the work types is national leadership and advocacy.

National leadership means leading and helping make decisions about intellectual disability health across Australia.

Advocacy means speaking up to make change.

This is the picture we use for our national leadership and advocacy work.

Better Research and Data

Another work type is better research and data.

This means making research and data better.

Research is looking up information to find answers to questions in a planned way.

Data is information that is collected so it can be looked at and used to make decisions.

This is the picture we use for our better research and data work.

Improved Health Services

Another type of work the Centre does is improved health services.

This means making health services better for people with intellectual disability.

Health services are places that people go to get help with their health, like

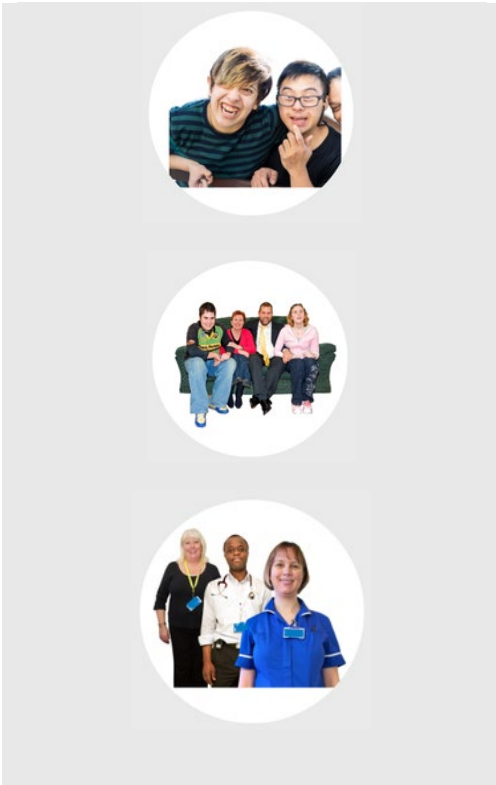

- Hospitals
- Where a dentist works
- Places you go to get help with your mental health

This is the picture we use for our improved health services work.

Resources and Information

Another work type is resources and information.

The Centre makes resources and information for

- People with intellectual disability
- Their families and supporters
- Healthcare workers

Resources are instructions that help you do something.

This is the picture we use for our resources and information work.
